The courage to let go

OLIVE BRANCH, MISSISSIPPI — November 5, 2026. Sixteen-year-old singer-songwriter Kadin Alexander introduces his first original single, “Seed,” a reflective song about change, uncertainty, and the courage to leave familiar places behind.

The song began with a simple idea: a leaf on a branch, afraid to let go. As Alexander developed the story, the leaf became a seed. That transformation shifted the meaning of the song from an ending to the possibility of a new beginning.

Inspired in part by friends approaching graduation, “Seed” captures the tension between holding on to the people and places that have shaped us and wondering what comes next. Its message also speaks to anyone navigating a move, a farewell, or a new season of life.

Alexander’s musical identity is grounded in intimate acoustic arrangements, meaningful lyrics, and a peaceful folk-inspired sound. His influences include The Arcadian Wild, Tors, and John Michael Howell.

Based near Memphis, Alexander has been developing his live performance experience through appearances at the Mississippi Ale House, performing solo and with fellow musicians. He hopes to expand into additional Mid-South venues in 2027.

“Seed” is an introduction to the kind of original music he hopes to create: thoughtful, story-driven songs that give listeners room to slow down and reflect.

FAITH. STORY. SONG.

Behind “Seed”

Every song begins somewhere. For “Seed,” it began with a conversation about a leaf.

The question was simple: what if a leaf was afraid to let go of the branch it had always known?

As Kadin explored the idea, the leaf became a seed. A leaf falls at the end of a season; a seed falls with the possibility of something new.

With friends preparing for graduation, the idea took on a personal meaning. Leaving a familiar place can be exciting and frightening at the same time.

“Seed” is about the moments when the future asks us to release our grip on the past. Sometimes letting go is not the end of the story. It is where growth begins.

Conversation starters

Suggested interview themes and responses; Kadin should review and personalize them before they are quoted.

Where did “Seed” come from?

It began as an idea about a leaf afraid to leave its branch. Changing the leaf to a seed made the story more hopeful: leaving could be the beginning of growth.

Why write about change?

Friends approaching graduation made the uncertainty of leaving familiar people and places feel especially relevant.

What should listeners take away?

It is okay not to know exactly what comes next. There can be possibility on the other side of uncertainty.

How would you describe your sound?

Peaceful, acoustic, and story-driven. The lyrics matter, and the arrangement should help tell the story.

Why release “Seed” first?

Its imagery and meaning reflect the kind of thoughtful original songs Kadin wants to make.
